I was going back and forth trying to decide whether to give this book a 4 or 5. Christ had all the properties of God and humanity.

Atonement is a doctrine that describes how human beings can be reconciled to God. Orson Pratt saw this scripture as applying not only to ancient Israel but also to the Latter-day Saints, who were driven from their homes in the East to the deserts of the Rocky Mountains. The answer is found in the person and work of Jesus Christ. Second, not only do we see the Redeemer, but the redeemed. Protestant teaching, originating with Martin Luther, teaches that salvation is by faith alone. I am going to read the third book but I am definitely going to have to get used to it being about different people.
